Plastic not fantastic, green groups tell consumers

By Susan Pope

GREEN GROUPS HAVE BEEN telling consumers to ditch plastic bags, and now they are telling them to ditch plastic bottles. The National Resources Defense Council (NRDC) and the Sierra Club have released a report titled "Plastic Bottles: A Guide to Reducing Your Plastic Bottle Consumption." The report says that Americans use more than 100 billion plastic bottles a year, and that the average person uses about 100 plastic bottles a year. The report also says that plastic bottles are made from fossil fuels, and that they are not biodegradable. The report suggests that consumers can reduce their plastic bottle consumption by using reusable bottles, buying bottles made from recycled plastic, and recycling plastic bottles.

Students at Saint Joseph's College are learning about environmental issues.

Albay agog over visit of DiCaprio

By Greg M. Gorman
 PHILADELPHIA — Sen. Frank Lautenberg (D-N.J.) was so impressed by the visit of Leonardo DiCaprio to the U.S. Capitol last week that he decided to make a special trip to the actor's home in Los Angeles to meet him. Lautenberg, who is a member of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, said he was "in awe" of DiCaprio's commitment to environmental issues. He said he was "impressed by the actor's dedication to the environment and his willingness to use his platform to raise awareness about climate change." Lautenberg said he was "honored" to have DiCaprio visit the Capitol and that he was "proud" to represent the state of New Jersey. He said he was "looking forward" to meeting DiCaprio in Los Angeles and that he was "excited" to see the actor's commitment to the environment in action.

Citizens to have say on gov't spending

By R. Higgins
 WASHINGTON — A new bill introduced in the U.S. House of Representatives would give citizens a say in how the federal government spends money. The bill, known as the Citizens' Budget Act, would require the president to submit a budget to Congress that includes a list of the top 100 federal agencies and their respective budgets. Citizens would then be able to vote on whether to approve or disapprove of each agency's budget. The bill would also require the president to submit a separate budget for each of the top 100 agencies. The bill was introduced by Rep. John Dingell (D-Mich.) and Rep. Charles W. Stenholm (D-Okla.). It has already passed the House and is now in the Senate. The bill is expected to be passed by the end of the year.

Pasig River Run in aim for world record

PHILADELPHIA — A group of runners from the Pasig River Run in the Philippines are aiming to set a world record for the longest continuous run. The run, which is held annually in the Philippines, is a 100-mile race that starts in the city of Pasig and ends in the city of Marikina. The runners are hoping to break the current world record of 100 miles, which was set by a team of runners from the United States. The runners are training hard for the race and are confident that they can set a new world record. The race is expected to be held in the Philippines in the near future.

Figure 1 is a schematic representation of the experimental design. It is divided into two main sections, 'a' and 'b'. Section 'a' illustrates the basic trial structure, showing a sequence of three boxes: 'Stimulus presentation' (containing a question mark), 'Response' (containing a question mark), and 'Feedback' (containing a question mark). Section 'b' shows a more complex sequence, including 'Stimulus presentation', 'Response', and 'Feedback' boxes, followed by a 'Delay' box (containing a question mark), and then another 'Stimulus presentation' box. The sequence is repeated for multiple trials, indicated by arrows and the word 'Repeat'.

The image shows a newspaper page with a large, dark, rectangular object in the foreground. The object appears to be a car or a large piece of furniture. The page is mostly blank, with some faint text visible in the upper right corner. The text is too blurry to read, but it seems to be a headline or a short article. The overall image is very dark and has a high level of contrast, making it difficult to discern details.

Restoring trust a must as BP deals with oil spill

As the BP oil spill continues to unfold, the company's reputation is being tested. BP's initial response to the spill was criticized for being slow and untransparent. The company's stock price has fallen significantly, and its credit rating has been downgraded. BP's CEO, Tony Hayward, has been criticized for his handling of the crisis. The company's reputation for safety and environmental responsibility has been damaged. BP is now facing a long and difficult road to restore trust with the public and investors.

A LEADER'S

As a leader, it is your responsibility to guide your team through difficult times. You must be transparent, communicate clearly, and show empathy for your team. You must also be decisive and take action. Your team will look to you for guidance and support. You must be a role model for your team, demonstrating the values and behaviors you expect of them. Your leadership will determine the success or failure of your team during this crisis.

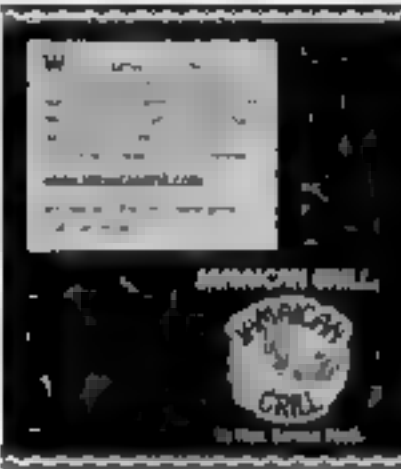

BP's reputation is a valuable asset, and it is essential for the company to take steps to restore it. The company must be transparent about the spill and its response. It must communicate clearly with the public and investors. It must show empathy for those affected by the spill. It must be decisive in taking action to prevent further spills. BP must demonstrate its commitment to safety and environmental responsibility. Only then can BP restore trust with the public and investors.

How a bunch of rugby moms and dads—and an art teacher—saw the team triumph in India

By Ben Pomeroy
Staff Writer

IT WAS A WARM, sunny day in the heart of the Indian capital, New Delhi, and a group of about 20 people were gathered on a grassy field. They were the parents and an art teacher of the New York City Rugby Club's youth team, who had just finished a practice session. The group was a mix of ages and ethnicities, but they all had one thing in common: they were all parents of a child who played rugby. They were all smiling and looking at each other, and some were taking pictures with their phones. The group was a mix of ages and ethnicities, but they all had one thing in common: they were all parents of a child who played rugby. They were all smiling and looking at each other, and some were taking pictures with their phones.

Behind the façade of Facebook

By Steven C. Rogers

THINKING OF LOGGING out of Facebook and going back to work? You're probably not alone. The site has been a hot topic in the workplace for some time now, with many companies banning it. But what if you're a freelancer or a small business owner? How do you manage your time and energy when you're constantly distracted by the social network?

It's a common problem for many people who use Facebook. The site is designed to be addictive, with notifications and updates that keep you coming back for more. But when you're working, it can be a major distraction.

One solution is to use productivity tools that block access to social media during work hours. Another is to simply log out of the site and focus on your work.

Zuckerberg didn't stop there. He began to use the site to promote his own products, such as the Facebook app. He also used the site to raise money for charity, such as the Facebook Foundation. In 2010, he launched the Facebook Impact Fund, which invests in social enterprises that use technology to solve social problems.
